

Warm to life Down Under

■ by KATIE JAMES

A NEW life in a sunnier climate has never been so appealing.

Emigration is at its highest level since World War Two, even though moving to a different country can be a tricky business.

There's lots of paperwork, not to mention finding a job on the other side of the world. However, help is at hand to take all the hard work out of this process and that comes from a company called The Emigration Group.

The company specialises in helping people to emigrate to Australia and New Zealand, providing a full range of emigration services, including help with visas, jobs, finding a house and settling in.

Australia and New Zealand have become popular destinations for people in the UK looking to make a new life overseas, not least for the beautiful scenery, better quality of life and excellent job opportunities.

They are experiencing skill shortages in a number of key trades and industries. Tradespeople like bricklayers, electricians and carpenters and professionals including teachers, nurses and accountants are all in short supply.

Paul Arthur from The Emigration Group said: "We can help people find their way through the maze of paperwork. We take the stress out of finding a job, new house and can assist in recommending a school for kids or introducing you to new, like-minded friends.

"The visa process can be a real minefield for people who don't understand the procedure. Luckily, we do!"

The company will be holding seminars in Bristol on February 23 and 24; Leamington Spa on March 15 and 16, and Leeds on May 10 and 11. So start making your plans to build a new life overseas, now.
