Brummy's moving abroad

A new study claims Birmingham is a hotspot when it comes to people emigrating and starting new lives overseas.

That is according to migration experts who claim that over the last six months there have seen a huge rise in people from the city enquiring about moving away.

On average more than 200 thousand Brits leave every year.

For Brits interested in emigration to Australia and New Zealand, The Emigration Group is holding a seminar at Chesford Grange Hotel in Leamington Spa, Warwickshire on the 25 April.
